Mine spec Isuzu ute gets to work for BMA

In a coup for local business, Isuzu ute Australia chose North Queensland engineering company Macs Engineering to develop the first Isuzu D-MAX ute built to BMA mine specifications.

With Isuzu D-MAX being a relatively new product in the Australian market, the roll over protection and other safety features for the Isuzu D-MAX mine vehicle had to be specifically developed for this vehicle.

Brisbane based Isuzu ute Australia chose Macs Engineering for their renowned capabilities in the development of mining related equipment and their reputation in converting mining vehicles specifically. The choice was made somewhat easier due to Macs Engineering proximity to local Mackay dealer North Jacklin Isuzu ute.

"We are extremely pleased that Isuzu ute Australia has confidence in both Macs Engineering and in North Jacklin Isuzu ute," said John Nash, dealer principal while taking delivery of the mining spec vehicle this week.

Mr Nash continued "To be given the opportunity to have Isuzu D-MAX as a presence in the mining sector with locally developed mining specified equipment is a win-win for local business and mining companies alike."

Featuring internal roll over protection, mine site communication equipment plus a host of safety features this vehicle is not your everyday Isuzu D-MAX, but still provides drivers and passengers with a comfortable ride. More importantly for mining companies, the Isuzu D-MAX legendary diesel fuel economy keeps saving owners money long after purchase.

The Isuzu D-MAX BMA mine specification ute is based on the 4x4 Isuzu D-Max Crew Cab Chassis SX, which comes standard with air-conditioning, power windows, remote entry and a three year/100,000km warranty and the Isuzu ute National Free Roadside Assistance Program. While the Isuzu D-MAX BMA mine specification ute is set to venture to Bowen Basin mine sites for real world testing and evaluation, the standard 4x4 Isuzu D-Max Crew Cab Chassis SX and a range of Isuzu D-MAX Single, Space and Crew utes and cab chassis are available to view in Mackay at North Jacklin Isuzu ute, Kay Court, North Mackay.
